Why plan for disaster?

Disasters can happen anytime and anywhere. Severe thunderstorms, tornadoes, floods, fires, snow and ice storms, and hazardous material spills are all hazards that are real possibilities in our region. When they occur, you may not have much time to respond.

It is important to take steps ahead of time, such as putting an emergency kit together, making plans, and having ways to stay informed. Planning in advance can help you cope with resources which are limited or cut off as a result of a disaster. Local officials or relief workers may not be able to assist you right away. You will need to rely on the people and resources available at the time.

The good news is you have resources around you to help meet your daily needs and carry out your regular activities.

Preparing for disasters includes identifying which supplies, devices, medications and equipment are most important to you and then taking action to make sure they are accessible in an emergency.

Some supplies are standard items that everyone depends on, such as food, water, clothing, lodging, transportation and communication devices. These items should be included in a standard emergency kit.

Remember, this booklet is YOURS! It is also a tool to help other people help you. Once you've completed the sections that apply to you, provide a copy to the people you rely on the most during and after a disaster.

What are your specific needs?

In addition to standard emergency supplies, you may require additional resources to meet your specific needs. Extra consideration must be given to include these additional resources into your emergency preparedness efforts.

Examples include:

- If you rely on a motorized wheelchair or device requiring electrical power
- If you take medications to manage a potentially life-threatening medical condition, do you have enough on hand to include some in your emergency kit? Do you have information written down in your emergency kit that will help you get more if needed?
- If you have specific dietary needs, have you included food that you can eat in your emergency kit?

This booklet is meant to help you 1) assess the additional resources you need the most; 2) gather important information about those resources; and 3) identify possible alternative sources.

GET A KIT | MAKE A PLAN | STAY INFORMED

This booklet will help you identify additional supplies that should be in your emergency kit, which resources need to be part of your emergency planning process and which information sources will help you stay informed.

What's important to you?

Before diving into this booklet, take a moment to determine which sections are meaningful to you. Once you have selected the most important areas, this page will help guide you to the appropriate sections to address those topics as they relate to putting your kit together, making a plan and staying informed. In the boxes below, please check all topics important to you.

Communications

Communication during and after a disaster is extremely important, but it can sometimes be challenging. You may have a variety of phones, tablets and computers you use to communicate with others. It is good to have more than one type of device in case one is not functioning, such as during a power outage or cell towers being overloaded.

How will you stay in touch?

1. If you use a cell phone, do you have an extra phone charger for your phone? Do you have a car charger or additional way to charge your phone? YES____ NO____
 - a. Have you included your extra phone charger, car charger or other charging device in your emergency kit? YES____NO____

2. Do you use an aided Augmentative and Alternative Communication system, such as electronic tablet, message board or TTY? YES____NO____
 - a. What is the device? _____
 - b. Do you have a backup device in your emergency kit? YES____NO____
 - c. If your device requires a battery, do you have extra batteries and/or a battery charger in your emergency kit? YES____NO____
 - d. Who is your service provider? _____
 - e. Telephone number of provider: _____

Equipment

Do you use specific equipment in your regular everyday activities — to get around, eat, hear, see and read, or breathe easier? If you did not have that equipment, would it affect your ability to function or communicate? Do not assume these items will be provided by emergency responders, relief workers and shelter providers.

What equipment do you need to function?

List the pieces of equipment that are either Extremely Important (vital for life functions) or Important (significantly affects ability to function):

1. Piece of equipment: _____
 - a. Do you have this piece of equipment or a duplicate in your emergency kit?
YES_____NO_____
 - b. Provider that assists you with this equipment: _____
 - c. Address: _____
 - d. Phone number: _____
 - e. Does this provider have a plan for providing services after an emergency?

Food

Food is one of the most important things we need. Standard emergency kits recommend non-perishable foods that require no refrigeration, preparation or cooking, such as certain canned foods, high energy foods, like granola bars or peanut butter, and comfort snacks like cookies. If you have special dietary restrictions or food allergies, some standard suggested foods may not be appropriate. Remember, emergency shelters may not be able to accommodate your dietary restrictions.

What foods can you eat?

1. Do you have dietary restrictions or special dietary needs? YES _____ NO _____
2. Describe the restrictions: _____

 - a. Do you have documentation in your kit that describes your dietary needs?
YES _____ NO _____
 - b. Does your kit include food that accommodates your dietary restrictions?

Action Items!

If you answered no to any of the questions above, take action to make sure you have the items needed. List your action items here:

Medication

Medications fall into many categories: prescription and over-the-counter; those that are actively treating a condition, (e.g., antibiotics), those that maintain a condition (e.g., blood pressure medication) and those taken periodically in response to symptoms (e.g., Tylenol or ibuprofen for a headache). You need to know which medications are important for your health and if there are any restrictions that would make replacing your prescriptions more difficult in case of an emergency. If you're not sure, talk to your physician and or pharmacist.

What medicines do you take?

List medications in this section that are Extremely Important, Important or Moderately Important using the following definitions:

- Extremely Important — vital for life.
- Important — needed to manage serious health conditions.
- Moderately Important — needed to manage moderate health conditions that are not life threatening.

Pets

Pets are a very important part of our lives. We are responsible for their well-being and need to prepare for their needs during and after a disaster. Items such as food, bedding, carriers or cages, leashes, harnesses and collars should all be included in your emergency kit.

Don't forget your furry friends!

Just like humans, some pets require specific food, medication and other items not readily available at general retail stores.

Supplies

Supplies that get used regularly or wear out make up a significant portion of an emergency kit. Do not assume items you need will be provided by emergency responders, relief workers and shelter providers.

Do you need specific supplies?

Supplies can be divided into three categories, all of which should be included in your emergency kit:

1. Standard supplies, such as food, water, clothes, first aid items, basic toiletries and sanitation supplies, including toilet paper, baby wipes and hand sanitizer, etc. (These are supplies that everyone needs to have in their kit and do not need to be listed in this section).
2. Additional supplies specific to your needs that can be readily replaced at a variety of retail outlets, such as hearing aid batteries and adult disposable briefs.
3. Additional supplies specific to your needs that are only sold by particular outlets or sources, such as medical oxygen tanks or ostomy supplies.

List the supplies that are important for your daily functioning and those that are hard to find.

Lodging/Shelter

Different types of disasters require different approaches to lodging or sheltering, but seeking safe shelter is a priority in emergency situations. Having multiple options for obtaining immediate shelter and for long-term lodging allows you to be prepared should a disaster strike.

Unsafe to stay? Where will you go?

If you have to evacuate your home during an emergency, you will need to find a safe place to go and decide how to get there. You may choose to go to a hotel or motel, stay with friends or relatives, or find an evacuation shelter.

1. If you need to leave your home suddenly due to a disaster, such as a fire or flash flooding, do you have an escape plan for your residence? YES____NO____
2. If you usually take an elevator to get to a level where you can exit the building, do you have an alternate way to get to that level? YES____NO____
3. Where are the potential meeting places (within your neighborhood and outside your neighborhood) that you, your family, neighbors and friends have agreed upon in case of evacuation?

Locations near residence: _____
Locations outside your neighborhood: _____

4. If you must seek shelter safely outside the affected area before or after a predicted hazard strikes, such as a snow or ice storm, where would you go?

Name of place or contact: _____
Address: _____
Phone: _____

Can this location accommodate your daily essential needs and supply important equipment to help you function? YES____NO____

Sheltering for severe weather

In the case of severe thunderstorms and tornadoes, the safest place to be is inside an interior room without windows on the lowest level of the structure you are in. However, in many multi-level residences, the basement or the lower level is only accessible by elevator or stairs. It is not advisable to take an elevator to the lowest level. You will need an alternate way to get to safe shelter or find another safe place to go.

1. Does your residence have a basement or a lower level where you can go for safety?
YES _____ NO _____
2. If you have mobility issues and if the basement or lower level of your residence is only accessible by elevator and/or stairs, do you have an alternate way to get to that level?
YES _____ NO _____
3. If you have mobility issues and you cannot get to a basement or lower level, does your residence have a small, interior room without windows, such as a closet or bathroom, where you could seek shelter if necessary? YES _____ NO _____

Sheltering in place

“Shelter-in-place” means to take shelter where you are at home, work or school, and to seal the room you are sheltering in as thoroughly as possible. This action may be needed when the air quality has become unhealthy due to the release of chemical, biological or radiological substances.

1. Does your residence or building have an interior room without windows, such as a closet or bathroom, that you can access for safe shelter? YES _____ NO _____
2. Are you able to turn your central heat and air system off? YES _____ NO _____

People

Throughout our lives there are many times we might need to rely on other people to help us. Whether we are very young or growing older, fighting a chronic illness or living with a disability, struggling to communicate or make ends meet, assistance from others can make a difference. During a disaster, it is important to have a support network of individuals you can contact for help.

Who do you depend on most?

The people that help us every day — caregivers, family members, friends, medical professionals, neighbors and co-workers are important resources. In a disaster situation, some of these people may be able to help you start recovering, while others may not be able to provide assistance.

Action Item!

Think about the people you depend upon for essential daily functions, such as getting dressed, preparing meals and transportation. Have conversations with these people about your and their emergency preparedness plans. Are they willing to be listed as a resource to call upon should a disaster take place? Are there others who are willing to be a “backup” in case your normal providers are not available?

Tip #1

Gather information for several people who would be willing to help you during an emergency.

Tip #2

For those people that provide services to you, such as case workers, personal care assistants and medical professionals, ask if they plan to offer service after a disaster if their location is not affected and modify their normal service to meet the needs of the situation.

Family, friends and others

Who are the local people who know you and your capabilities best? These could be family members, friends, roommates or coworkers you might call on for assistance. List at least three people with their contact information.

Pets

For many people, pets are an important member of the family. The likelihood that you and your pets will survive an emergency, such as a fire, flood or tornado, depends largely on emergency planning done today.

Who will care for your pets?

Whether you decide to stay put in an emergency or evacuate to a safer location, you need to plan ahead for your pets. If you must evacuate, take your pets with you if possible. It's important to know that animals may not be allowed inside public shelters, so plan in advance for shelter alternatives that will work for both you and your pets.

Do you have pets? YES____NO____ If so, what type?_____

Transportation

Transportation can be a critical resource when it comes to disasters. Some disasters provide enough warning time that the best option may be to evacuate before the disaster hits. Other emergencies happen with little notice and you may not be able to go anywhere until after the situation has stabilized.

How will you get around after a disaster?

In any disaster situation, please consider what your safest options are when seeking transportation services. Do you rely on a transportation service provider for your regularly scheduled transportation or periodic transportation needs? It is good to have several options for transportation in case your normal source is affected by the disaster.

Please list transportation providers who can accommodate your particular needs.

1. Transportation provider's name: _____
